The third part of Cuneiform Texts from Cappadocian Tablets contains the texts of seventy-four documents of the class called "letters," and continues the series commenced in the second part. Apart from the importance of these documents for linguistic study, the material contained in them for the understanding of the trade of Asia Minor and Syria at the end of the third millennium B.C. is of value to the historian. The personal names continue to be of interest, and special mention should be made of Uzbia (No. 113,336, obverse, l. 19), clearly the same name as Ušpia or Aušpia, an early Assyrian governor already known to historians. This name is not Subaraean, as has sometimes been thought, any more than is Kikia (see Preface to Part I), a name also prominent in early Assyrian history. The importance to Assyrian history of the proof that the early Assyrians used Cappadocian names is great, and it is probable that the Cappadocian tablets will throw further light on the question of Assyrian origins.

The copies of the inscriptions here published were made by Mr. Sidney Smith, M.A., Assistant in the Department, who also prepared the index of registration numbers.
